

THE LEAVING

WHEN LIFE WALKS OUT,

IDENTITY WALKS WITH IT.

The Red List Index tracks how fast species are moving toward extinction, where 1.0 means all species are safe and 0.0 means all are gone. Across 22 Pacific nations, the index has fallen every single year since 1993, driven by climate change, habitat loss, and invasive species. From birds to corals, from mammals to cycads, nothing has been spared. This is not a prediction. This is already happening.

"The Pacific is not just an ocean. It is alive or it was. Each point of decline is a piece of that life, gone forever."

31 YEARS OF SILENCE. HOW MANY MORE?
